Bryan is only the latnot the Ohio Democracy declare for bloody show!" the gold standard, since they ignored the Chicago and Kansas City platforms? The politician finds no trouble in answering what Mr. Bryan's statesmanship conceives to be an unanswerable reproach. And if Mr. Bryan had fought and won his way up through the grades which stars in the dramatic as well as in the profession of politics have to climb, he would never have asked the question.

It is an axiom in politics that a superfluous declaration or plank in a platform is impolitic. Why should the Ohio Democracy handicap itself with a declaration as unnecessary as it is impolitic? And why should it, on the other hand, reaffirm the Kansas City platform? Are not platforms made at each Natitonal and State Convention? What is there so sacred, superior or successful about the Kansas City platform that for all future time the Domocracy of the State and nation must be reduced at their conventions to the perfuntory labor only of reaffirming this miraculous creation.

Why did not the Democracy of Ohio reaffirm the national platforms of the party previous to the Chicago and Kansas City platforms? Were they not Democratic? The fundamental principles of all Democratic platforms were reaffirmed by the Ohio Democracy because the fundamental principles of Democracy never change and are eternal. But the issues raised by Jackson as those raised by Bryan, very properly had no place in a State platform, and would be as incongruous as the issues which split the Democracy in 1860 and resulted in two conventions, a bloody war and a Republican President. Mr. Bryan does not claim, for it would be presumptious, that he alone originated and is solely interested in the silver movement. It is no more his than the millions of Democrats who endorsed and voted for that issue, Where, then, does his particular asthe Ohio Democracy because, in their this issue, as the platforms of Chicago by the Northern and Southern Democ-

That is what a common Englishman would get, Isn't it strange how many people in this country sympathize with those rotten aristocrats? The public mind is confused, too, to come extent about discriminating be tween the aristocracy of England and the masses of the people. There is nothing in common between them. The aristocracy have no more sympathy with the masses of the English people than they have with the Mad Mullah's followers. I know it, for I was born and raised there. I often meet Eng-lishmen here who think when this aristocracy is touched up that all Englishmen are meant. "Nothing of the kind; the masses here sympathize with the English masses. "Yes, I know that, and what I want to say is this, we are becoming as thinskinned here. When American aristocrats and plutocrats are touched up, just because they happen to be for the time being President or Cabinet officer, a lot of old women go around whining has been arrested, as stated, by the about the vile paper that criticises Health Department for permitting nuithem. If these people knew how little sances, and by the Building Inspector they are thought of by Cabinet officer ish heads. There is a public sentiment which is being industriously and insidiously encouraged to make Cabinet they please without fear of exposure of public criticism. It will be the end of our present few liberties when such a condition of affairs prevails here, and we are getting there," concluded this evel-headed Englishman, as he bade The Globe man "good night."

Street Car Running Boards. 'Why don't you attack the car footoard on the street car lines, which nobody but a monkey or a youthful athlete can safely tread, especially with a trailer?

Thought The Globe did notice the matter. Well, I must have skipped it then applied for a job as conductor, and the "boss" eyed me just ten seconds and said, 'We only want young men. You won't do. I am just thirty years of age. Do I look older, Mr. Globe?

'No; you wear your years well. "Now, what age do you reckon this poss' thinks is a young man?'

"Give it up." "Why, from 16 to 25; not a day older. And it is to this class of youths the lives of the public are intrusted. Why, ven a man of 30, and of full sense, can hardly manage a car with a trailer. This is the only city in the country where the street car company is perductor. No wonder ladies are being in jured or thrown daily. It is simply a ductor to attend to them. Why do the District Commissioners permit the Traction Company to violate the law nd endanger the lives of the public Is there no redress, and have the pub lic no rights, either a corporation or the Commissioners need respect?" And the indignant citizen made the running board with a flying leap.
